

Before Indiana passed their law diallowing telemarketing where it was not wanted, we were receiveing 12-20 calls per week. They totally interrupted our family life. My only response ever to them was to put me on their no call listand hang up. Obviously they did not. They interrupted family dinners night after night. They even grew so bold as to call me back to say we had been accidently disssconnected and call me back! One even called me back to tell me that I had been rude to hang up on them. Familys nowadays have very little quality time together. That time does not need to be ruined by a total stranger irratating everyone.
